

Чекина Е.Б. Русский язык для оралманов: Учебное пособие для начинающих. Алматы, Казак университети. 2014. – 163 с.

A manual is made within the framework of functionally-communicative лингводидактической model of language. Leading principles РКИ is realized in him - to the active communicativeness, practical orientation and cross-cultural orientation.

This Manual is oriented to educating of the special contingent of students, before not studying Russian or owning Russian only in the volume of elementary level. A manual will help to attain the first certification level of the Russian language proficiency and will allow to satisfy with the basic communicative necessities of these students facilities of Russian in the field of everyday communication and to the sociocultural sphere. In addition Manual forms basis for a capture by a language in the educational-professional sphere of communication, that it is especially important in connection with the general tendency of educating to Russian in unlanguage institution of higher learning.

A manual has for an object to teach students to talk on domestic and cultural themes, read texts with a dictionary.

Important, that Manual gives possibility of the multiple going near educating, depending on individual когнитивного style taught and teaching : possibility of choice of the substage of educating, preferable type of speech activity or grammatical theme.

Every lesson is the module having independent and completed character. In addition a manual is provided with a bilingual dictionary, facilitating and accelerating work of student.

Grammatical material of manual is organized on syntactic basis in a communicative aspect. Basic unit of educating is a speech model.

Text material of Manual is presented by original authorial texts and successful literary text manipulation. There is of interest work with text in the last lessons of manual.