

Abstract

Students' scientific and research work is the most important form of training specialists of the highest qualification, forming the creative intellectual potential of the Republic. Solution of the scientific and research work tasks are connected considerably with forming active creative potential of a person, with striving to learn him or her to create, to find independently ways of solving problem situation and tasks, to carry out independent scientific investigation.

The article contains the analysis of science integration and students' scientific and research work at the chair of international law. There shown the characteristics of the development of students' scientific and research work, the peculiarities of combination of studies and extracurricular activity as constitutive parts of the integral pedagogical process and influence of their mutual connection on the development of the scientific and research work and emphasized a positive experience of the scientific and research work organization. The scientists of the chair attract the young generation to their research. The subject of students' scientific and research work is connected with the main research of the chair.