FOREWORD

Kazakhstan's independence is an opportunity for cooperation and expansion of relations between the states, the emergence of many international, political, economic, cultural and trade organizations.

High level of cooperation and development of relations is a testament to Kazakhstan's choice of the right path. There is a special desire to learn a foreign language in Kazakhstan. Because, our country needs language specialists to communicate with other countries. To cover this need in higher education, the process of teaching foreign language subjects has been transformed at a new level and has received a broad impetus to the in-depth study of a foreign language. At the same time, in our country and in the field of education, we have now begun to democratize, strive for humanity, and reach this world level.

Persian belongs to the Iranian language group of the Indo-European language family.

Persian is the official language of the Islamic Republic of Iran today. More than 80 million Iranians speak this language. Today, Persian is taught in many countries around the world, and the interest of foreigners in Persian is growing every day. The most beautiful of the Eastern languages is Persian. This language is the official language of the Islamic Republic of Iran. At present, Persian is taught as the main and second eastern language in the universities of Kazakhstan. The number of people learning Persian has increased. The great scholars of the East, such as Firdousi, Rudaki, Sagdi, Hafiz, Nizami, Moulavi, Khayyam and other great poets, became famous for their valuable works in Persian.

Economic ties between Iran and Kazakhstan have existed for a long time and continue to this day. In this regard, the country needs specialists, translators who know the Persian language. Therefore, this textbook is a very useful tool for language learners who are learning Persian. Here, initially, language learners learn the four types of
