In this textbook entitled «Social structure of society and middle class», authors analyze different approaches to the definition of social structure and stratification of the society. Institutional changes that have affected all strata of society brought to life new social groups and new types of socio-economic activity.

This study discusses theoretical approaches that determine the nature of social inequality, formation of the social structure and stratification of the society. This work also analyzes the problem and perspectives for development of the society's middle strata. The empirical data for the authors' research is based on the sociological study conducted at the Center of Sociological Researches and Social Engineering (2013).

This textbook is aimed at Master and doctoral students, instructors, as well as everyone interested in the problems of modern society.
